I seem to be taken seriously… with the FHEA letters in my email signature. Fulfillment and happiness… completing and enriching. I found a sense of challenging but definitely enjoyable and enriching. I found a sense of self-affirming process, a voyage in self-discovery. Meeting fellow applicants… simply exhilarating.

Outcomes of my National Teaching Fellowship

• >30 NTF events across Australasia. Inclusive recognition welcomed. Individual self-efficacy linked to external evidence.
• ‘Proof of concept’: professional recognition through EFS with cohorts from ANU, QUT, CSU, UoW, USC, UNE and AUT (NZ).
• ANU EFS has now awarded almost 400 fellowships across 18 universities (15 in Australia, 1 in New Zealand, 2 in China).
• Ongoing research on impacts on individuals post award of fellowship. Report, publications and website to tell the story.
• Australasian Symposium on Professional Recognition of University Educators 30th May (>60 people, 26 institutions)

What fellows think ...

PSF captures… really good teaching practice as opposed to things that look good on paper. I am more active and confident in L&T innovation… [and] classroom-based research. … reading through my final version… I honestly felt quite proud of what I had written. … self-affirming process, a voyage in self-discovery. Meeting fellow applicants… simply exhilarating.

… with the FHEA letters in my email signature I seem to be taken seriously… … such a worthwhile exercise… to reflect on what I do every day… very proud of these achievements. … really appreciated [that] professional staff could be involved. I think that is huge. …

How?

2011 Higher Education Academy links professional recognition scheme to UK Professional Standards Framework (PSF), inclusive of all who teach and/or support learners (e.g. academics, tutors, professional staff).

2013 ANU signs Memorandum of Understanding with Higher Education Academy as its first international subscriber.

2013 Research: PSF provides common language for teaching; gives identity to university teachers; influences UK practice. 3

2014 ANU Educational Fellowship Scheme (EFS) becomes first HEA-accredited recognition scheme outside UK. Designed to be strongly developmental, inclusive, peer-mentored, and peer-reviewed, with distributed leadership

2014 Australian University Teaching Criteria & Standards Framework aligned with academic promotion in some institutions. 4

2016 HEA-accredited recognition pathways at >200 subscribing institutions (4 in Australia). Worldwide: >73,000 HEA fellows.

Why?

Increasing need for accountability around qualifications and teaching capabilities, especially for sessional staff.1,2

Academics and learning support staff want reward/recognition for teaching that can influence employment/promotion.1
